

UNO office locates jobs for students

By Monica Gill-Sparrock

Many UNO students pay for their own education. Although some receive financial assistance, most attend school and work.

Part-Time Student Employment is a free service for UNO students. It attempts to find the right job for a student, especially one that is career-related. Last year the employment office placed 1,087 students in jobs, according to Ann Kelleher, supervisor of the service.

Students take advantage of the services offered, but many aren't aware the service exists, Kelleher said. In January 91 students were placed in jobs, 26 of which were career-related, she added.

Two students placed in jobs at a local insurance company by the job service work part-time and have successfully incorporated school and work.

Irene Gregory, a 22-year-old accounting major, has been with the company for one and a half years. She said management is excellent and very supportive in helping her schedule work hours around her class hours.

Gregory said she works in the "incoming WATS department" at the company, adding that she was trained extensively before she was placed in the job. She said she is now able to answer questions for policy holders and other insurance companies, which has made her an "asset" to the company.

"The company invests time and money in you, so you are truly an asset," said Gregory. She said she also received CRT and public relations experience in her job.

Robin Bonner, 20, an Air Force ROTC student majoring in social work and black studies, has worked at the same company since August 1980. Bonner's duties include reminding policy holders about overdue premiums.

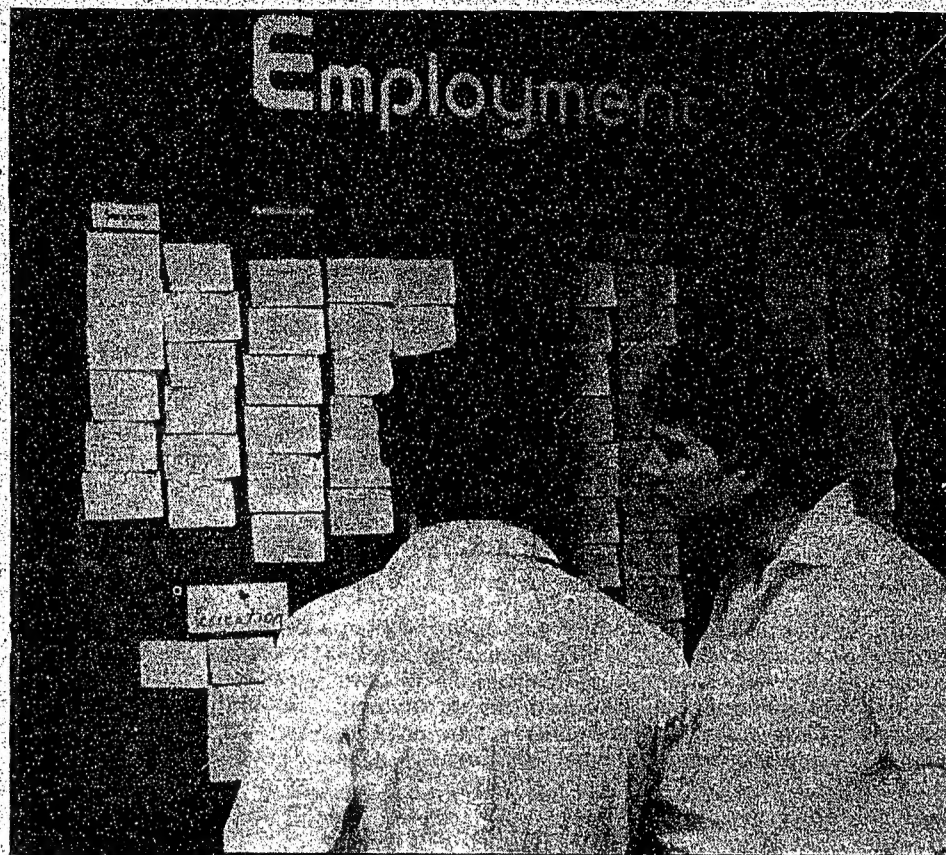

Although her work hours are fixed (4 to 8 p.m.), Bonner said she is pleased to be working there. She said the company is understanding about her classroom schedule.

The only benefit given to part-time employees is paid holidays, but "that is fine," according to Bonner.

She is taking 18 credit hours at UNO this semester, which she described as "tough," but a schedule that works out with her job.

Part-time workers at the insurance company aren't promoted but are judged on merit, according to Gregory and Bonner. Both said they are paid salaries above the minimum wage.

The employment office maintains bulletin boards in the Milo Bail Student Center with job listings. Each job has an identification number and more information is available in the Eppley office. The boards are located on the first floor, next to the Student Health Service.

UNO TV expands service

KYNE contracts for cable

By Bernie L. Williamson

Cox Cable's presence in Omaha will mean expanded programming services for KYNE-TV, according to UNO Director of Broadcasting Don Petersen.

KYNE-TV, also known as University Television, is a Nebraska Educational Television (NETV) production facility and transmitter site. KYNE is located in the basement of the UNO Engineering Building and may be received by turning to Channel 26 on the UHF dial.

In an agreement with Cox Cable, KYNE programs may soon be viewed on Channels 11, 13, 16, 17, 18 and 48 on the cable system as well.

Cox has also asked the Metropolitan Omaha Educational Broadcasting Association (MOEBA) to manage five educational access channels. MOEBA has been involved with in-school instructional programming since 1965. Its medium since conception has been KYNE.

"NETV holds the license for KYNE but lets MOEBA do much of the programming," said

Petersen.

In 1981, MOEBA merged with the Consortium of Associated Schools and Educational Resources. The consortium is a non-profit organization formed in 1978 to provide Omaha educational institutions with adequate channels, equipment, and systems design to effectively use cable TV. During the City Council's deliberation on cable franchising, the consortium evaluated the various proposals submitted by applicants. They later submitted an in-depth report to the council.

The consortium represents 23 local educational institutions including the Omaha Public Schools, UNO, UNMC, and Creighton University. The consortium includes production facilities at Creighton, Metro Tech, the NU Medical Center Westside, Public Schools, Omaha Tech High School, as well as KYNE. The consortium, however, contracts with the UNO TV department to be the origination center for its programming.

The consortium reimburses KYNE for part of the engineering, scheduling, and administrative costs of cable programming. The funds will be collected through an annual membership fee charged to consortium members. Individual members will also be responsible for any production costs incurred in producing their own programs.

Equipment

"Omaha is lucky to have channels dedicated to its educational needs," said Petersen. "Cable franchises prior to 1980 only had one channel for educational access with virtually no support." Cox is providing UNO with $129,000 worth of equipment. Among the items supplied are a routing switcher, a portable camera, and a three-quarter inch, portable video tape recorder.

Cable TV also has a special advantage for KYNE. According to the Cox program guide, KYNE will also have its own channel, Channel 11.

"Now that we have our own channel," said Petersen, "we can put on whatever we want, whenever we want. It opens

Van Dyke says plus grades aid 'hard-workers'

By Larry Tarkington

Plus grading should motivate students to perform better in the classroom, according to a UNO administrator.

"Say we have a student who is plugging away with a solid C. That B looks a long way off, but if he works a little harder he should be able to pull a C-plus," said Gardner Van Dyke, assistant vice chancellor for student academic services.

"It gives a student something to shoot for," he added.

Under the new system, deserving students will receive plus grades instead of having to settle for a "straight" letter grade of A-B-C-D-F. For example, a student who earns a B-plus will receive such a grade instead of a B, as in previous semesters.

There is no provision, however, for A-plus grades, so the highest grade point average a student can still receive is 4.0.

"It's the best thing we've come up with at this time," said Faculty Senate President Michael Gillespie.

He discounted any potential problems with favoritism by teachers in the new system, noting that it is a problem in any grading system.

Last semester, the Faculty Senate estimated the cost of implementing plus grading at $30,000 to $40,000.

"I can't exactly say how much it cost, but it was more expensive than originally anticipated," said Gillespie. "What it entails is changing the program from the former 'straight' system to the plus system."

Van Dyke said the primary consideration of the change was rewriting computer programs, which was completed about two or three weeks ago.

"What we've done is set up the program so that we feed the computer the accepted integers, which are the numbers 4,3,2,1, and then we expand on it," he said.

Van Dyke explained that the computer has been re-programmed to include a

.5 option to record plus grades.

"The faculty have the option of using the system or not using it. This framework was set up for the students' benefit," he said.

"But I feel the majority of the faculty like it," continued Van Dyke. "It offers some flexibility for the harder-working student. I believe by and large that the teachers want to expand the evaluation process of students."

Van Dyke said he has spoken to administrators at other universities which have plus grading. He said they told him that the impact on students' GPAs was minimal.

Cable allows KYNE to expand programs — News Briefs

(continued from page 1) the door for UNO to reach more people with instructional programming, university-produced programming, and programs about the university," said Petersen.

"Most people get hooked into VHF (Channels 2-13)," he said. "Once this habit is developed, it takes a lot of promotional effort to get people to tune in UHF (Channels 14-83). Cable makes it just as easy to tune in KYNE as Channel 3," he said. The additional channel will also enable KYNE to expand local programming.

"One of the reasons we haven't done much sports in the past is because of limited (broadcast) time," said Petersen. "Now with Cox and access to their remote van, we plan on doing significantly more sports coverage."

Fine arts simulcasts

He said cable would also allow the university considerably more flexibility in scheduling Instructional Television (ITV) and university-produced programs for use in local classrooms. Cable TV will allow KYNE to do "many repeats of programs at many times of the day," said Petersen.

"Community programming will increase," said Petersen. "We will also do more events to highlight the university community," he added. Petersen cited KVNO/KYNE simulcasts of fine arts events and the "Quarterly Mayoral Report" as examples of programs that may become more numerous.

"Faculty recitals are very entertaining," said Petersen. "We've been doing them as a simulcast with KVNO. Viewers can hear them in stereo and see them in color," he added. The "Quarterly Mayoral Report" is essentially a press conference. "It was started because we found a great deal of interest in city government," said Petersen.

Students will also benefit from the expansion because "with added time available, we will be able to introduce more student-produced programs," Petersen said. "I think that will be a real valuable experience for them."

"I think we have quite a bit to show off," said Petersen. "Cable equalizes the 'superstations' (like WGN in Chicago and KBMA in Kansas City) with small local production facilities," said Petersen. "Our goal is to look as good or better than the other stations on cable," he added.

The second section of "Introduction to Computers" will be offered at UNO this spring.

The 10-session course will meet from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturdays beginning March 6 in the Eppley Auditorium.

The course will provide an introduction to computer technology — what computers are and how they work; terminology; how computer systems are developed; applications in education, business, government and other fields; trends in the industry; home computers; and future uses of computers.

The Career Development Center is sponsoring a series of workshops from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays beginning March 2 for individuals seeking help with career decision-making, educational planning and searching for jobs. Registration fee is $10.

TABS (Teaching Analysis By Students) is available through the Center for Improvement of Instruction and is a confidential teacher evaluation instrument. If an instructor is interested in evaluation, TABS should be administered at mid-semester, according to center officials. Fifteen minutes and a minimum of 12 students are necessary for administration of TABS.

Be All You Can Be

Artist and poet combine on series of art panels

By Bernie L. Williamson

"History is a clock that tells us where we have been, where we are, and where we intend to go . . .," wrote Clifford Like.

Like, chairman of the Third World Coalition of Minority Artists, has been on campus recently to participate in Black History Month. He and artist Hakika Assad are collaborating on a series of seven art panels depicting the history of American blacks. A poem by Like will accompany each panel.

Yesterday, they took their work to the North Omaha Girls Club to begin a three-day presentation. They plan to return to the Nebraska Dining Room of the Milo Bail Student Center Monday to complete the project.

The first of the panels, dealing with ancient African and Egyptian culture, has been completed. It, along with a poem by Like, has been on display since the beginning of February. Another panel, the third in the series, is half-finished.

When completed, the third panel will depict the "beginning settlement and colonization," of blacks in America, said Assad. It will also show the "revolutionary War, enslavement of blacks, black migration to Nebraska, the Civil War, and emancipation of blacks," he said.

The second panel will portray the entrapment of Africans and their perilous voyage to America, said Assad. Other panels will depict the Reconstruction and ragtime eras, both world wars, the Harlem Renaissance, and the civil rights movement from the 1960s to the present.

The last panel "will deal with the 21st Century," said Like.

"All seven will be framed," he added. In addition, all of the poems will be matted and embossed except the seventh, which will be mounted on a scroll.

"We did a lot of research for the project," said Like.

Art in the making . . . Assad's third panel.

"Our (black) history is one of the most ancient," said Assad, "something we should be very proud of."

The project, however, has run into financial difficulties. Assad estimated it would take about $5,000 to complete the panels. He said, "So far, total support has been less than $600." Money for the materials used in the panels has thus far come mostly "out of our own pockets," said Assad.

Assad said he will speak with Vice Chancellor Richard Hoover about possible university financing. He also credited Alonzo Smith, assistant professor of black studies, with helping keep the project alive. "He (Smith) is working on a tentative grant with the Nebraska Arts Council," said Assad.

Like and Assad encourage students to view and discuss the panels. "It's well worth watching the progress," said Like.

UNO writer tallies black history's all-time 'top ten'

The writer is a UNO graduate student.

By Matthew C. Stelly

I would like to name my "top ten" black leaders of all time. While this is risky for obvious reasons, I think it fitting that the individuals — and the impact of their ideological positions and contributions — be given attention during this "celebration."

The following individuals then, are not named in order of importance.

Marcus Garvey, a Jamaican, is best remembered for his "Back to Africa" movement during the early 1900s. The disillusionment that many black people felt at the end of World War I had a lot to do with the acceptance of Garvey as a leader.

Sundiata (1970) wrote, "This growing mood of frustration and despair on the part of many Afro-Americans was a favorable climate in which Garvey could promote his ideas of race redemption."

Booker T. Washington is known as "the accommodationist," because of his "Atlanta Compromise" speech. But it is Washington's book, "Up From Slavery," that motivated Garvey to become a "race leader."

Additionally, Washington's greatness should be considered alongside the fact that when he issued the compromise speech, blacks were being lynched at a rate of about two per day in some parts of the country.

W.E.B. DuBois is best known for his "Talented 10th" philosophy, which claimed that one of 10 blacks should be trained, and that 10 percent should uplift the rest. However, the main reason I deem DuBois so dynamic is that at the end of his life, he renounced his American citizenship and died as a resident of Ghana.

Fourth, I have to go with Carter G. Woodson, the "father of black history" who was a dedicated scholar and a master psychologist. It was Woodson who said, "If you can control a man's thinking, you do not have to worry about his action. When you determine what a man shall think, you do not have to concern yourself with what he will do."

Next comes the conductor of the "underground railroad," Harriet Tubman. Even though this great black woman would often suffer from recurring spells of dizziness, she not only escaped slavery herself but also is said to have gone South some 19 times and freed more than 300 blacks from the bondage of slavery.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., is another black man who provided symbolism and unification for black people. It was King who decided to take religion beyond the spiritual realm.

And it was King who, while being remembered as a "nonviolent teacher," also taught "We depend too much on white philanthropy. Too often those of us who are in the middle class live above our means, spend money on non-essentials, and fail to lend financial support to organizations and educational institutions which so desperately need funds."

El Hajj Malik El Shabazz (Malcolm X) was, in the opinion of this writer, one of the greatest expressions of black manhood in this or any other generation. Malcolm's "ballot or the bullet" philosophy and his belief in "by any means necessary" were important facets of the development and maturation of the black movement of the 1960s.

Angela Yvonne Davis, an avowed Communist, was in the forefront of the '60s movement. While her belief in communism is debatable, I find her true value in the fact that as a black woman, she showed and paved the way for more female involvement in the struggle for liberation.

Ninth is the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Although I disagree with much of his philosophy, approach, and methodology, it is Jackson's sharpness of mind and his understanding of the issues that confront black people that win my respect for him as a potential leader. Maybe there is some validity in his statement, "Nobody can save us from us but us."

This list would be incomplete without the inclusion of the one man whom I personally believe is one of the greatest true leaders of all time. He is State Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha.

Chambers doesn't have the benefit of "pro-black" conditions to work with, as did some of the others; Chambers doesn't have the ideal geographic situation that some in major cities can benefit from:

But he has the type of commitment and dedication that enables him to merit respect, even from his enemies. And though he is the line black in the state legislature, he is always at work trying to make conditions better for the black community.

All of these are people we can borrow from; use their experience and acumen to defend and develop our life here on campus, as well as the more important life in the communities from which we came.

Washington kicked

Kudos are long overdue for Don Leahy and the staff in the athletic department. From the student managers to the coaches there is a sense of sincere dedication to the program. The hard work has paid off as UNO can boast one of the finest records in Division II.

Kudos to the people who have worked on special projects or presentations which brought UNO a share of the richness of culture provided by Black History Month. The achievements and aspirations of black Americans provide an inspiration from which we can all benefit.

Kudos to Florene Langford, SPO and others involved in preparing a special panel discussion on student fees. The forum, which will be held in the Ballroom of the student center next Wednesday afternoon, will focus on very important, yet neglected, areas of concern. Student Government should have the right to use fees to seek legal recourses on decisions made by the NU Board of Regents. Both sides to this basic issue will be explored. We look forward also to the discussion of student governance and student press rights.

Our kick needs a plane ticket to Washington. Our target is the self-serving officials who have been purchased by the military-industrial establishment. Dwight Eisenhower warned us of the growing scope and influence of this sector long ago. But with the Actor and Cap Weinberger, we face a situation unmatched in peacetime history.

Estimates on the increased military spending of the Reagan administration vary almost as much as the dresses in Nancy's closet. Figures run from $900 million to $1.3 billion. A day. Including Sundays. His Tintedness likes to speak of waste in the food stamp program. The entire budget for that program would run the Reagan Pentagon for 33 minutes.

Graduate students can't get student loans. Students whose parents die may now be denied social security benefits which would have helped them get through college. Meanwhile, we see drastic increases in military spending. And what do we get?

A new tank that guzzles fuel and needs a bulldozer to dig ditches in the battlefield. We get a stationary MX missile system that is more vulnerable than the system it is supposed to replace. The new way to strike it rich is to come up with a weapon system.

The real cost is in the loss of programs that are designed to help people who can't help themselves.

All letters critical of individuals must be signed by using the first and last name or initials and last name. Letters do not necessarily reflect the views of the Gateway.

To the Editor:
UNO parking: I would pay a $100 parking fee per semester for a contract-bound guarantee of a given parking space reserved for my exclusive use whenever I need it. That is reasonable for the price. Anything else is not reasonable; to ask that fee for any lesser service is insulting.

Matthew Stelly: Why are Gateway readers subjected to the double jeopardy position of being assaulted in articles and letters by Stelly? In addition to the letter (Feb. 17 edition) being an illogical, incomprehensible diatribe, it is a foul abuse of privilege.

Joseph C. P. Alvarez

To the Editor:
Regent Simmons should be thinking of more ways to improve the attendance at UNO football games, if that is his true concern. His attacks on the program are uncalled for and based on false information.

I'm proud to be a small part of the UNO football team. Athletically and academically, UNO can match any record in Division II.

In fact, the entire athletic program on this campus is one in which students can be proud.

I have a suggestion which might increase attendance at UNO games. UNO should do the same thing it does for the women's basketball team — host a "Pepsi Night."

Roger A. McCordle
UNO football player

To the Editor:

Recently, I spoke to a Human Development class taught by Bill Meredith. The topic of discussion was racial and ethnic prejudice.

First of all, I would like to say thank you to Dr. Meredith for accepting the challenge and daring what should have been done a long time ago. As many of us know, classes at UNO are often taught solely from a middle-class, white perspective.

Therefore it is imperative to add other perspectives, attitudes, and opinions in order to give people a global view of how our world functions.

Secondly, I would like to say that I did not speak to the class to gain its sympathy for "our cause," nor to appeal to its conscience. That has been tried before by many of our black leaders and it has failed. I came to speak the truth as I saw it, and the truth always hurts — but it can set you free.

Thirdly, I noticed some people were making faces and moaning toward the end of class. I hope you were not under the delusion that I was going to get scared and stop speaking. However, I'm glad that you are concerned with your physical health — they say facial exercises are great for maintaining muscle tone.

Lastly, there was a young man who termed my talk as "irrational." I must say he was absolutely correct! I get irrational when the existence of my people is threatened in any way and when my black sisters and brothers are still being lynched, starved, and stripped of their human dignity.

Blacks and other minorities are still considered "no class" citizens, and I aim to fight for freedom by any means necessary.

I get a little irrational when I have to explain to supposedly intelligent people that there is a world beyond their lily-white castles — and it is not paved with gold nor composed of milk and honey.

Another referred to me as being "crazy." If being committed to the well-being of my people and other Third Worlders is crazy or irrational, then crazy and irrational I will remain.

Elva R. Jones

To the Editor:

Those of us who attended Mayor Boyle's meeting at UNO Feb. 11 wish to congratulate the students for their constructive suggestions for solutions to UNO's parking problem.

As westward neighbors of UNO, we applaud the number of students who said they oppose destruction of the neighborhood when there are other solutions to the problem. Among those solutions mentioned were a high-rise garage, more direct and efficient MAT service, expansion of the shuttle service, and better scheduling of classes.

We do hope the Board of Regents and the university administration will listen to its students.

We have always supported quality education at UNO, and a non-destructive solution to the parking problem. We admire those who are aware that we must preserve what we cannot replace.

Coyotes hand Mavs a post-season upset

By Jeff Heineman

Coach Bob Hanson's strained and upset voice filled the quietness of UNO's lockerroom Tuesday night after South Dakota's 74-70 upset of the Mavs in first-round action of the North Central Conference post-season tournament.

"They came to play and we didn't," the coach told his disappointed ball club. "We're 21-6, that's not bad. When you leave tonight, go out with your heads held high. We're not through yet."

Despite the loss, UNO has already accepted an invitation to play in the Division II Midwest Regional tournament next week at a site yet to be determined.

South Dakota took the lead early in the game and increased it to eight points on four different occasions. Coyote guard Barry Glanzer did the most damage. He scored 12 points in the first half and dished off three assists.

The hot hands of seniors Vernon Manning and Rick Keel brought UNO back. The two hit a variety of jumpers from all over the floor, and Keel's jumper with 4:40 left in the half tied the game at 28.

The Mavericks didn't take the lead until 2:20 later. Dean Thompson slapped the ball out of Glanzer's hand and Rickey Suggs then dived on the floor and knocked it up the court to Mike Millies, who scooped it up and passed it back to Thompson who scored the layup. UNO led 36-34. The rest of the half saw little more scoring, and the Mavs went into the lockerroom at the half leading 39-38.

Neither team could establish control of the game for the first 10 minutes of the second half. UNO scored only six points in the first nine minutes, but the Coyotes could do little better, and led only by five, 50-45.

The Mavs tied the score in the next minutes on a three-point play by Thompson and a short jumper by Henry Riedel, but South Dakota scored six unanswered points and took a 56-50 lead with 8:40 remaining.

UNO fought back and drew within two on three different occasions because of some excellent outside shooting by Manning, but it was Glanzer again who killed the Mavs. His drive along the baseline and reverse layup put USD up by four with 1:12 left, and after UNO scored the next time down the floor, his assists to center Bruce Bykowski at the :43 mark and then to forward Mike Bunn with :24 remaining iced the game for the Coyotes.

"When Glanzer made that last drive along the baseline for the layup," said senior Tony Cunningham after the game, "it typified the end of the game. We kept getting close, but not close enough. Even when we got behind, I knew we could still win, but he (Glanzer) came to play." Thompson led the Mavs' scoring with 19 points. Manning had 16 and Keel added 14.

"It was strictly execution," said Keel afterward. "We would come down the court, make one or two passes and the ball would go up. We hit well from the outside, but you can't win a game shooting from 20 feet all the time."

Glanzer, the NCC leading scorer, topped all players with 20 points and nine assists. Bunn and guard Don Warren both had 18.

UNO snatches berth; regionals next for Mavs

In your face, guys, Dean Thompson leaves little doubt as to where this one is going down for two points.

UNO was awarded one of 11 berths to the Division II regional basketball tournament Tuesday by the NCAA Basketball Committee.

The other 21 berths are to be announced Sunday, in addition to the locations for all tournament games. The regionals will be held March 4-6.

"I'm excited and happy for the players and our fans," UNO head coach Bob Hanson said after the announcement. "It was one of our team goals."

Hanson acknowledged that the berth came as little surprise.

Hanson said UNO has put in a bid to host the Midwest Regional tournament, but added that the decision will depend on the outcome of the NCC tournament.

If either North Dakota or UNO wins, that team will host the regional. Should neither team win, the host will be determined by the overall records of both schools, head to head meetings (in which UNO holds a 2-1 edge), and quality of competition (the Mavs have faced two Division I schools, North Dakota none).

This week's NCAA Division II rankings:

1. Cheyney State	22-2	160
2. North Dakota	22-4	152
3. District of Columbia	20-5	141

Ranked No. 6

UNO not assigned to tourney

Although ranked No. 6 in the NCAA Division II women's basketball poll, the UNO Lady Mavericks are one of two teams in the top 10 that have not been awarded berths in the NCAA tournament.

An announcement will be made this Sunday, but even then, there is no guarantee that UNO will be one of the teams in the Midwest Regional. If they are, the regional game will probably be next weekend.

This weekend, the Lady Mavs, 19-5, will defend their NCC championship for the third year in a row when they travel to Vermillion, S.D.

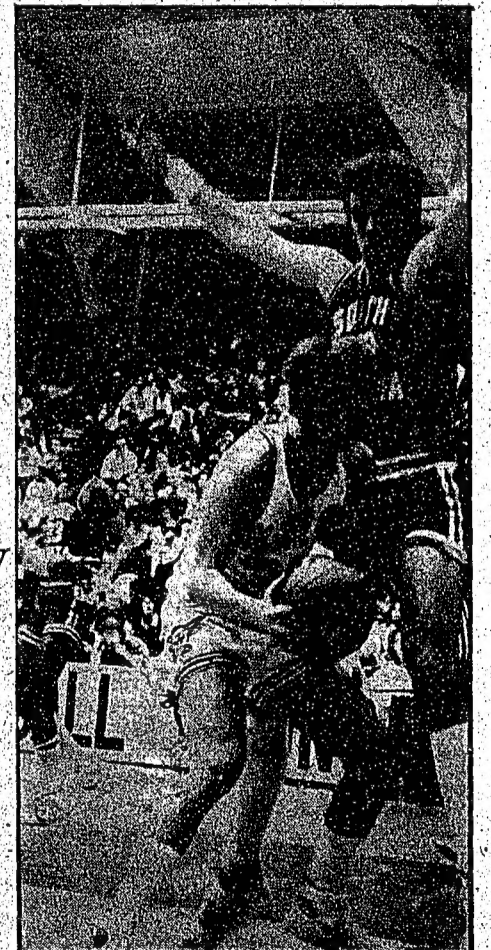

Several teams will be battling it out

UNO is seeded No. 1, South Dakota is No. 2, North Dakota State No. 3, South Dakota State No. 4, Augustana No. 5, North Dakota No. 6, Morningside No. 7, and Northern Colorado No. 8.

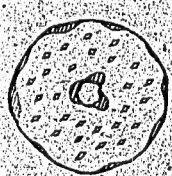

All first-round games were played last night, while second-round action is tonight, and the finals tomorrow at 8 p.m.

This week's ratings are:

Statistics crew produces a speedy 'labor of love'

The article includes opinions of the author.

By Edward Vinovskis

Most of the fans at a UNO basketball game are there to relax and enjoy themselves, taking time off from their everyday tasks of working and going to school. But not everyone there is merely on a leisurely hiatus. The basketball players obviously are doing their thing, along with such other diverse entities as the cheerleaders, ticket sellers, referees and concession stand personnel.

But some of the most important jobs at a game are done by a little-noticed group situated between the benches of the respective teams. They're the people charged with the responsibility of keeping track of the official records of the game.

One segment of these recordkeepers is composed of the stat crew, a group of four people who are collectively accountable for providing a numerical summary at the end of the first half and also at the conclusion. This year's group consists of Tim Fitzpatrick, Greg Zyla, Carol Treller and Rob Knightly.

Their job is obviously a labor of love

since the compensation is fairly modest. "We get $10 per game plus free admission," explained Fitzpatrick. "Plus we have the best seats in the house and are right in the middle of the action, such as whenever there are disputes between the referees and coaches."

Fitzpatrick has been serving on the stat crew for two years and got his start strictly by chance. He was at a UNO game when one of the staff people didn't show up and was literally recruited out of the stands by Mike Kohler, a recent UNO graduate and former editor of the Gateway.

Speed is of the essence in this job because the opposing coaches need to see the halftime stats in order to better plan their strategy for the rest of the game. The UNO crew usually has the individual and team information all filled out on one sheet four minutes after the conclusion of the first half and the final compilation five to 10 minutes after the game has ended.

UNO Sports Information Director Gary Anderson has high praise for the UNO contingent. "We feel we have the fastest and most efficient stat crew in the North Central Conference. And by direct local comparison, they do a much better job than Creighton does," said Anderson.

It's important that the stat crew try to maintain a sense of neutrality while fulfilling their duties, but they're only human and sometimes succumb to the temptation of cheering when the Mavs make a great play. "I try to remain objective for both teams in keeping the records," said Fitzpatrick, "but I tend to be somewhat on the generous side when giving either side credit for assists."

One aspect of the numbers game that would probably perplex even the most ardent of basketball aficionados is the team rebound. There are two situations when this category is invoked. In the first instance, when a shot is taken and missed and a wild scramble for the ball results in it going out of bounds, the team awarded possession is credited with a team rebound.

The second case is rather strange and deals with a dead-ball free throw. When a player is awarded two free throws (not a one-and-one) and misses the first, his team is given a team rebound in the statistics. Thus anytime a shot is taken and missed, there has to be a corresponding rebound credited to someone, either an individual or a team. And when Henry "Huck" Riedel or Terry "Soap" Sodawasser block a shot, whoever recovers it is given a rebound.

A turnover is more easily defined. Whenever a team has possession of the ball and loses it, they are guilty of committing a turnover. If a player commits an offensive foul, he is simultaneously charged with two boo-boos, a foul and a turnover.

Statistics in general can provide a means of subterfuge for liars and other nefarious characters but in sports, especially basketball, they usually tell a meaningful tale. But before we can reach the stage of interpretation and analysis, the un-heralded stat crews of the basketball world have to first lay the ground work for us. As with so many other facets of the UNO athletic department, the stat crew here takes a back seat to no one.

Maverick swimmers end season with victory

"We are very pleased with the progress the swimmers have been making this season," said Coach Paul Cerio about his co-ed swim team. The Mavs won their meet last Friday against Concordia College 61-51.

No records were set this time, but the times were fast enough to beat Concordia in six of 11 events.

Both teams were even at the beginning of the last event, the 400-yard free relay, 51-51. But Tom Miles, Jim Rogers, Barb Slogr and Mike Randolph skimmed through the water to make a time of 3:36.83 to Concordia's 4:20.3, and win the meet.

Usually part of the men's swim team, diver Jan Davis added ten points to the team's efforts by winning the one meter five diving event with 144 points, and the one meter six open diving with 204.45 points.

Todd Samland, Slogr, Rogers, and Randolph combined talents to win the 400 medley relay in four minutes and 9.4 seconds.

Samland won the 200-yard freestyle by swimming it in 2:07.91, Randolph won the 50-yard freestyle in 23.06 seconds, and Rogers won the 100-yard freestyle in 50.17 seconds. The men's team will be at Grinnell, Iowa, tomorrow for a post-season tournament there. "It's a tournament for schools that don't have a conference to belong to," said Cerio.

Track team faces strong field in NCC indoor

By Henry Cordes

The UNO men's track team will compete for the North Central Conference indoor championship today and tomorrow in Fargo, N.D.

After a second-place finish in the meet last year, UNO head track coach Don Patton said the Mavs now have the quality to go to the top.

"Everyone we're taking is a possible scorer," he said. "This is the strongest team we've taken North since we've been in the conference."

Patton said, however, that even his best team may not be able to win the meet. Newcomers Mankato State and St. Cloud State, along with traditional powers South Dakota State, Northern Colorado and North Dakota State figure to make the team race a close one.

"The conference is much stronger," Patton said. "I think this team would have breezed through the conference last year."

Patton said the Mavs must score heavily in the first events — the sprints and hurdles — to have any chance of winning the meet.

The sprinters, led by junior college transfer Graylin Butler, and a deep corps of hurdlers which includes defending NCC champ Dave Buckley, have been a reliable source of points all season.

Patton also sees the jumpers as important to UNO's title hopes.

Dan Bice, the defending NCC champ, 1980 conference champ Kent Van Briesen, and freshman Rick Hollendieck all figure to place in the top six in the high jump.

Bice, who also won the triple jump at the NCC indoor last year, had intended to red-shirt for the indoor season. He abandoned the plan last week after deciding the Mavs may need his help in the conference meet.

"It was a very unselfish gesture on his part," Patton said. "He will be a definite asset to the team, not only for his points but for his leadership."

Patton said the chances of UNO scoring in any event longer than the 1,000 are very slim, but added the Mavs can more than make up for it in the field events. "A win in the high jump is worth the same as a win in the 10,000," he said.

"The meet may come down to who keeps his cool," Patton said. "You have to be lucky but you can't wait for things to fall in place. You have to make them happen."

Bice won the high jump and the triple jump last Saturday as UNO took top honors in nine of the 15 events to outdistance a five-team field in the Nebraska Wesleyan Indoor Track Invitational.

"Pilot pens! You have to hold onto them with two hands."

"I don't get no respect. I make a deposit... this guy's making a withdrawal... including my Pilot pen."

It's almost criminal how people go for my Pilot Fineline. Why? Its fine point writes through carbons. And Pilot charges only 79¢ for it. People get their hands on it and forget it's my pen.

I got no pen. And no respect!

People go nuts over my Pilot Razor Point too. It writes with an extra fine line. Its metal collar helps keep the point from going squishy.

For only 89¢ they should buy their own pen—and show some respect for my property."

Intramural Update

The No. 1 team of the "A" league, Gandalf Gunners, lost their first game of the season to the Chairmen of the Board last Monday, 65-50.

The Gunners, without their leading scorer, Chris Salerno, were not able to keep up with the strong inside play of the Chairmen, and had a cold night shooting from the field.

Quickly establishing their lead in the first half, the Chairmen maintained a six to 10 point lead throughout. The Chairmen's Tim Millard prevented the Gunners from getting more than one shot off at a time.

In the second half, Ed Pouster, Kurt Anderson, and Art Moran were the Chairmen's strongmen, hitting several key baskets to help increase the lead.

Pat Salerno led the Gunners with 16 points, while Mike Salerno added nine.

Pousfer led all scorer with 19 points, Moran had 14, and Anderson added 12. The regular intramural basketball season has only a few games left. Playoffs begin the week after next with all teams having a .500 record or better being eligible to compete.

Lady Mavs to run for top spot

The Lady Maverick track team will be at Fargo, N.D. this weekend, defending their championship at the North Central Conference indoor tournament.

Last year UNO took nine of 13 events to clinch the team title. Regina Dale and Kristi Stewart Bundy combined efforts in that tournament for the win.

Dale and Bundy should again be leading the pack this year as the team faces South Dakota, South Dakota State, North Dakota, and North Dakota State in the tourney.

"I think between the two of them (Dale and Bundy) they're going to rack up a lot of points," said Coach Bob Condon. "But I think our quality is up so that the rest of the team will be scoring too."

One of the "quality" team members Condon was speaking of was junior Beth Kerschinske, who was named "Lady Mav of the Week" for her 5-6½ performance in the high jump, which qualified her for the NCAA nationals.

Wrestlers named for nationals

With the largest number of national qualifiers ever, the No. 4 Maverick wrestling team is on its way to tomorrow's and Sunday's NCAA Division II national tournament at Wisconsin-Parkside.

Nine men qualified in last week's NCC tournament. Junior Roger Hefflinger and junior Mark Rigatuso were both champions, while sophomore Rick Heckendorn, junior Phil Pisasale, and senior Ryan Kaufman placed second.

The only Maverick to miss going to the nationals is All-American Ted Husar in the 150-pound division. Husar placed fifth in the nationals last year, but failed to win two of his NCC matches this time.

UNO is ranked No. 4 in the latest Amateur Wrestling News poll. Cal State-Bakersfield was first, North Dakota State was second, and Southern Illinois at Edwardsville was third.

In previous seasons the Mavericks have finished seventh and third in the nationals.
